New Classes In Piano to Start at Local Studio

Kathryne Buffington Introduces Novel, Fascinating Method of Instruction

Something new in the study of music; something so novel and fascinating that the drudgery of piano lessons is completely lost in the delight of "composing" on a magical board, where the notes cling fast in their places as the eager little fingers move them about in the construction of simple tunes and harmonies wrought by fertile little brains; right before the eyes of the student all the mechanics of composition and performance are made to appear on this simple contrivance called the "Magic Note" which has been acquired by Kathryne F. Buffington, B. A., teacher of piano, for use in a new summer course for beginners which will start on June 20.

Classes in four groups will be started on this date, including children of 3 1/2 to 5 years in one group, others from 6 to 13 years in three groups according to age. A very moderate rate for the lessons will be established, since the fact that the children are to be taken in classes instead of being given individual instruction, makes this arrangement possible. Classes will meet twice a week. Courses will include rhythmic training, ear training, playing at the keyboard, work on the magic note board and blackboard, sight-reading, transposition, keyboard harmony and will close with a recital given by the pupils in these four groups at the end of the six weeks. As demonstrated by Bernard Wagness of Chicago, who has just completed a normal course for teachers at a Los Angeles music house, the use of the magic note board is remarkable in its speedy results. Its construction is very simple but the child who uses it becomes intensely interested at once, as it combines the element of entertainment, handcraft, visual education and perfection in one of the most difficult arts by an easy method, all in one.

Moore winning honors at bridge. Mrs. W. W. Woodington was awarded a prize for making most quilt blocks while Mrs. Fess received a guessing prize, and a door prize was awarded to Mrs. Dalton.
